RABIES FROM A CAT'S BITE.

Lawyer Bartine, of Asbury Park, is dying from Hydrophobia.

OFFICIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD.
ASBURY PARK, N. J., June 4.—Lawyer Richard S. Bartine, a leading member of the Monmouth County Bar, is slowly dying an awful death from the effects of a cat bite received nearly nine months ago at his home in Lodi, after a new summer resort just north of here.

The bite was inflicted by Mr. Bartine's pet cat, and he thought nothing of the injury at the time. He neglected the wound and did not even have it cauterized. In fact, the thought that the cat might have been mad did not enter his head.

Dr. Samuel Johnson, who is Mr. Bartine's friend and physician, has been loaned to pronounce his imminent hydrophobia, but this morning the patient's symptoms were such that the doctor is convinced that his "friend" is a victim of the dread disease, and he has no hopes for his recovery.

Mr. Bartine grew worse during the night. He is frequently seized with violent spasms, and requires rest several strong men at his bedside to hold him.

Dr. David Bartine, of Middletown, a brother of the sick man, has been sent for, and will take charge of him when he arrives.

Mrs. Dr. Melting, a sister, is also watching at Mr. Bartine's bedside.

Intense excitement has been created here over the news that Mr. Bartine is dying from hydrophobia.

Chief of Police Bailey issued an order this morning to kill all dogs found without muzzles and all cats found roaming in the streets.

Lawyer Bartine is well known and highly respected in his neighborhood. He is the oldest living son of the late Rev. Dr. David Bartine, who was a Methodist clergyman in Philadelphia; his wife is dead. He has four daughters and a son, who live with him.

Inquiries are pouring in from all quarters, from friends and strangers alike, as to whether or not it is a real case of hydrophobia, and of course many are asking.

A story was published this morning that the cat which bit Mr. Bartine has probably been bitten by a mad dog. Dr. Johnson denies this.

"A cat bite is always dangerous, whether the animal had rabies or not," said he to THE EVENING WORLD this morning.

"The family say that Mr. Bartine never mentioned a dog, although the cat may have been chased by a dog. The dog story probably originated from this. The evidence is that Mr. Bartine and his dog found its carcass in the woods and drag'd it home.

What became of the dead animal is not known.

"I would not say that Mr. Bartine is not ill with hydrophobia. He has the symptoms of the disease, although he does not froth at the mouth, and he has not been bitten and shown any signs of the disease, suffering much in such cases." But that may come yet.

The detectives could not find him. Williams said that he perfectly willing to remain in the Tombs forever if the command got another chance to tell all he knew about Coakley.

The last night of May, 1889, Coakley's trial was moved, but he did not appear, and Williams was compelled to give up his defense.

Coakley and Williams were jointly held in jail until late in the evening. Coakley got out on 15,000 bail, but, however, settled with Hirschkowitz, paid off his bond, and made his head.

He could not resist the temptation to go and see the Giants with their batting practice, and it was at the Polo Grounds that the detectives spied him and placed him under arrest.

On the night of Jan. 26, 1890, Coakley, who had fallen out of the ranks of successful bank robbers and had taken on an unscrupulous, but not so bad a name, went to Coney Island, and James Williams, a pickpocket, stole $150 from the pocket of Israel Hirschkowitz, a tailor, of 99 Clinton street, on a second-story flat.

Williams, however, when Williams was arrested, fled to New York, and Williams was arrested in the Essex Marsh Police Court.

Coakley, who was held in custody, was released.
